Child Safety Forward Sacramento Funded to Implement Novel Approach to Enhancing Community Health

SACRAMENTO, CALIF. | June 30, 2023... In a major effort to reimagine California’s health system, the California Accountable Communities for Health Initiative \(CACHI\) today announced that Sacramento County’s Child Safety Forward Sacramento is one of 37 communities selected to advance an innovative approach to building community health and equity. Following a rigorous, multi-step review with 22 expert reviewers, Child Safety Forward Sacramento was chosen to implement an Accountable Community for Health \(ACH\), a sustainable platform for aligning local health and social services while centering community voice and equity.

“Accountable Communities for Health is a critical strategy to help California reverse historic inequities,” said Sheila Boxley, President and CEO of the Child Abuse Prevention Council of Sacramento. “They help us build trust in one another—bridging longstanding divides in our community. I’m proud that we’ve been chosen to embrace this innovative approach to improve the health and well-being of our community.”

In total, $13.5 million will be distributed to ACHs located in 27 counties over the next 2 ½ years. This funding aims to strengthen ACHs as local civic infrastructure and transform systems by facilitating multi-sector partnerships, aligning priorities and actively engaging communities.

“To ensure health for all, we must change how we approach health transformation, starting by making sure everyone is at the table,” said Dr. Tomás J. Aragón, director of the California Department of Public Health (CDPH) and state public health officer. “This major investment in lifting up community voice and centering equity is critical to achieving California’s goal of improved health outcomes, especially for lower-income communities and communities of color.”

ACHs are designed to break down existing silos by bringing together many sectors and players within a community to align and transform local systems, all while centering residents’ voices in decision-making. Using multi-sector and community-based partnerships built on a solid foundation of trust, ACHs empower communities to address persistent and emerging health challenges—and social inequities—in holistic and innovative ways.

“Community health is determined by countless complex social, economic and environmental factors that no one person or organization alone can address,” said Barbara Masters, CACHI director. “By bringing together diverse voices from every sector—including health care providers, businesses, governments, nonprofits, faith groups and community residents—ACHs provide a place for solutions to bubble to the surface and be put into action. Ultimately, ACHs help everyone begin to paddle in the same direction.”

In July, 24 communities will launch new ACHs, joined by 13 communities that have piloted the ACH model for the last five years. All will use the ACH as a vehicle to help make measurable progress on one of California’s major state health initiatives, such as California Advancing and Innovating Medi-Cal \(CalAIM\), Violence Prevention or the Children and Youth Behavioral Health Initiative \(CYBHI\).

CACHI was launched in 2016 as a public-private partnership supporting California’s ACHs through grants, technical assistance, policy change, education and evaluation. Acknowledging the success of these ACHs, Governor Gavin Newsom approved a $15 million budget line item in June 2022 to fuel the expansion of ACHs in California.

“ACHs go well beyond other health coalitions by doing essential work facilitating transformational change, providing much-needed structure, alignment and accountability. Most importantly, they advance the voice of the community in all of their work,” said Dr. Robert K. Ross, president and CEO of The California Endowment, an initial and ongoing funder of the ACH initiative.

About the Child Abuse Prevention Council of Sacramento

The Child Abuse Prevention Council of Sacramento (CAPC) is an agency affiliate of The Child Abuse Prevention Center, a statewide training, education, research, and resource center dedicated to strengthening children, families, and communities. For more than 40 years, the Child Abuse Prevention Center has successfully implemented its mission of preventing child abuse and neglect by training home visitors and family resource instructors that support and strengthen thousands of families each year. The Child Abuse Prevention Center has seen reductions in child abuse cases among the families they have served, increased school readiness for children served, and seen high rates of foster youth served graduate high school or complete its equivalency. For more information about the services provided by the Child Abuse Prevention Center, visit www.thecapcenter.org

About Child Safety Forward Sacramento

The CAPC will serve as the backbone agency for the Child Safety Forward Sacramento California Accountable Communities for Health Initiative to stop child abuse and neglect, with the goal of eliminating deaths and critical injuries throughout the county by 2030. Core to this work will be strong partnerships with county systems to advance child health and well-being.
